THAT BAD BACK

Do you have a dull, steady ache in the small of the back—sharp, stabbing twinges when stooping or lifting—distressing urinary disorders? For bad back and weakened kidneys Norway residents recommend Doan's Kidney Pills. Read this Norway statement.

Mrs. Mary Gammon, Maple St., says: "I have kept Doan's Kidney Pills in my home for years. I had a dull, heavy ache across the small of my back and often attacks of dizziness came over me. Doan's Kidney Pills which I got at the Kimball Drug Store relieved me of this trouble. I use Doan's Kidney Pills off and on as a kidney tonic and I couldn't wish for anything better to keep my kidneys in a healthy condition." (Statement given June 7, 1916.)

On September 4, 1920, Mrs. Gammon said: "I always have a good word for Doan's Kidney Pills since they cured me of kidney trouble and I am pleased to again give my endorsement. I confirm all I said in my former statement."

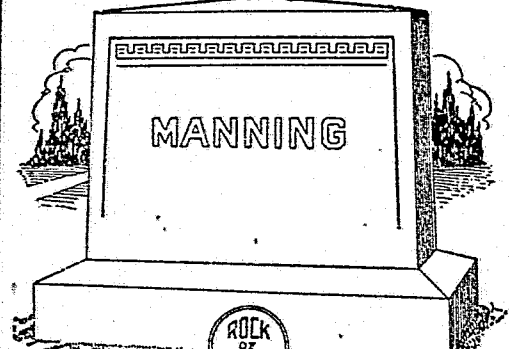

Price 60c. at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Gammon had. Foster-Milburn Co., Mfrs., Buffalo, N. Y.

EVERYBODY'S LONESOME

Way down deep within their hearts Everybody's lonesome; Far within their secret parts Everybody's lonesome; Makes no difference how they smile, How they live or what their style; Once in every little while Everybody's lonesome. People first in big affairs— Even they are lonesome; May like to put on airs, Just the same they're lonesome. Men like to put on airs, Every good; who gain all ends, Still reach out their hands for friends; Everybody's lonesome. Women, silk-clad, jeweled fine, Yes, they too are lonesome; When their gems the brightest shine They are just as lonesome. Some must serve and some command, All still seek with groping hand Love and friends who understand; Everybody's lonesome. Though your gift of friendship's small, Everybody's lonesome; It may answer someone's call, Someone who is lonesome. Give and give with might and main, Give your hands and join the chain, And your gift will be your gain; Sometimes, when you're lonesome. —Detroit News.

POULTRY DEMONSTRATION

County Agent Lovejoy has just completed a series of poultry culling demonstrations in the county, including nearly every geographical section. There have been large attendance averaging twenty at these demonstrations. Norway had the largest attendance of forty and Bethel the second largest with thirty-five.

The total number of birds culled was 888, and the total number of eggs taken were 265. The average number of eggs per hen was 29.8. Reports received thus far show that the good hens laid 1576 eggs the week after culling, while the culls laid only 69.

Several of the people who went home after the demonstrations and culled their own flocks have reported and the total number of hens culled according to these reports has been 750. The number of eggs culled was 320. The average percentage of eggs was 42.6. Eggs laid by the good hens in these flocks the week after culling was 1297, while the culls laid only 84. It looks as if poultry culling was worth while, and next year everyone in Oxford County will plan to pull the culls out of their flocks.

By EVELYN LEE

(Copyright, 1920, Western Newspaper Union.)

It was two years since Myrtle Norris had last met Ross Warren, and it was with something more than ordinary curiosity that she greeted him on the public street.

"They told me he had grown into a regular fire eater," babbled Myrtle to her mother and sisters. "I observed no trace of it. He is as dignified and gentle, and far more handsome than ever."

Half the people of Wyckly shared the impression as to this "fire-eating" feature. When Warren went West to join relatives on a ranch in a remote section, the local newspaper had kept tab on the various developments in his new experience. It was natural that these should be colored extravagantly, and there were many descriptions of instances where Warren had taken part in battles with rustlers and bad men generally. According to popular rumor he had become a species of fist champion and a ready shot. He had returned to Wyckly, his departure much deplored, at his record approved by his recent rough-and-ready but appreciative fellow citizens of the wild and woolly ranch lands. It would have seemed quite natural, therefore, if Warren had appeared in town on a madly cowering mustang, arrayed in buckskin, long-haired, gun-belted, and shooting up the place as a matter of regular usage. On the contrary, immaculately attired, self-possessed, reluctant to boast or even to allude to his frontier experience, Warren appeared to wish to be regarded as a simple, commonplace individual.

"He's a distinct disappointment," observed Bert Allen, an old-time boy rival of Warren, when both were en route to hold first place in the estimation of pretty Myrtle. "Our crowd expected he would bring some fun and excitement along with him, such as challenging Big Pete, champion lightweight of the athletic club, or cleaning out Dan Carson and his gang down at the flats."

"We fight out West because we have to do it to maintain our rights," Warren remarked one day. "Those who do it from malice or natural perversity generally die soon."

"He's afraid, that's what's the trouble," sneered Bert Allen. "Wants to pose as a cowboy ladies' man. When he isn't hanging around with Ned Norris, he is waiting a chance to meet his sister. I would like to see his mettle tried. Maybe he wouldn't seem so heroic a character after getting mauled by a common mechanic like Dan Carson."

Bert Allen had got the fighting idea in his mind and could not get it out of it. He was an ardent craven himself, and proceeded to plot and maneuver secretly. Carson was a bully, but all the same was endowed with great physical strength and some pugilistic science. When fired up with liquor he was ready for almost anything reckless and desperate. Bert taunted him with the loss of local prestige as "cock of the walk" since Warren had returned, slipped him a ten-dollar bill and hinted that he expected to get that much money's worth out of seeing the cowboy hero put out of commission, once for all.

The bully proceeded to put himself in the way of Warren, and boasted publicly his motive. Warren paid no more attention to him than if he was a troublesome fly. Then the specious Bert suggested: "Make an excuse to roll him about his Norris friends," and the next day as Warren and Ned Norris came down the street Dan lurched against the latter.

"Who you shoving?" he growled, and dealt the lad a brutal blow that sent him spinning to the sidewalk.

The fire that instantly flamed in Ross Warren's eye might have warned the ruffian, but he was fired up with drink and took a momentary inaction on the part of Warren as hesitating cowardice. Then Warren acted. Out shot his fist. It was like a mallet felling an ox. Dan Carson went flat with a thud. Warren turned to assist the bruised and bleeding Ned to his feet.

"Look out!" shouted a man across the street in alarming accents.

Dan Carson had staggered to his feet and had drawn a weapon. Warren sprang in front of Ned. There was a sharp report, he felt a stinging sensation in his arm, but he had saved the lad's life. Dan Carson was taken in charge by an officer, and Warren hurried to the nearest physician.

The company of faithful Ned Norris at his hotel while Warren was recovering from his wound, grateful, almost tender messages from Myrtle, flowers, fruit—Ross Warren knew that he had the best friends in the world.

The day when he again called at the Norris home, his arm still bandaged but fairly on the convalescent list, Myrtle welcomed him with a fervor that told him his love was not in vain. She took pains to change her position so as to be on his right side.

"You needn't be solicitous about my hurt arm," said Warren. "It is nearly healed."

"Oh! it wasn't that," began Myrtle, but paused confusedly.

Wise, witty, loving maiden! It was indeed not that, for an hour later, when Warren had expressed his heart's sentiment, that perfectly well arm encircled her slender waist, and she was glad to be on the right side.

The man who is the first to argue is usually the last to act.

No Coal Keep Comfortable Electrically

Not a pound of anthracite coal is to be had in Norway for "love nor money." But you need not be uncomfortable if you have electricity in your home.

As long as rivers flow to the sea, we shall have electricity to operate electric radiators. An electric radiator will keep a small room comfortably warm; it will take the chill off a large room. It is ideal and self-sufficient for early Fall weather, and in real cold weather it is a splendid helper for a stubborn furnace.

However you use it, the electric radiator helps the fuel situation.

Stand in front of an electric radiator 10 seconds and be convinced.

World's Fair

Wonderful Weather—Largest Crowd in History of Fair, 'Crowded Midway. Band in Attendance

Ideal weather Friday and Saturday put North Waterford on the map. A record breaking crowd for an opening day appeared Friday and another crowd gathered on the following day. Officials say 5,000 people attended Friday with 800 cars parked everywhere. No sane person will doubt the figures. Just one restless jam and then some more for good measure. Biggest crowd in the history of the World's Fair is the general opinion. With the mercury holding close to the ninety mark, cold drink establishments and the village pump worked overtime. Crowds wanted cooling breezes, and were satisfied in a trip to nowhere on the merry-go-round operated by Littlefield and Hatch. Sweater salesmen received a black eye and the rain coat fellow cried in vain to put across his big idea. The main object was to seek shade and ice cream.

Fakirism reaped good profits for the crowd seemed anxious to unload cash. Victualing places received patronage with open arms, and served a menu from hot dogs alone to a regular course dinner. Real oyster stews served by the Grange morning, noon and night attracted many. Beans, pastry and many other appetizing foods called hundreds to the Congregational church vestry where the Ladies Circle held sway. The well known Rice Tavern catered to a capacity patronage with Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Ray hustling to produce enough to satisfy the famishing.

Hall Exhibits

The Perkins store nearly opposite Rice Tavern was used for an exhibition hall this year. The Grange Hall where the show has been held in former years, had been converted into a dining room so the change was necessary.

Although the display was smaller than usual, a good showing was made especially in the fancy and needlework department.

Mrs. G. B. Morse and Mrs. W. L. Flint had a large display of drawn work and fancy articles of rare design. These were offered for sale and marked very reasonable considering the delicate needlecraft displayed.

An attractive display of needlework, made by Mrs. L. R. Muller, who is in her 80th year, was a rare display of fine embroidery.

Dorothy W. Green and Mrs. Florence Green had several artistic specimens of their handiwork. Fred Johnson showed burnt work, a fancy willow and bead basket, also a collection of table sets and tray covers.

Mary C. Hersey, aged 9 years, made a neat handkerchief case. Thelma Brown's display included dollies, embroidered table covers and various crocheted articles dear to the heart of the ladies.

Fall millinery including felts and plush hats were shown by Mrs. A. L. Freelove of North Bridgton. The exhibit was well arranged and attracted many purchasers.

A variety of vegetables occupied a table in the center of the room. George W. Briggs, Albany, had a range of popcorn and potatoes of large size. Leroy H. Hersey, North Waterford, showed potatoes grown the second year from a sizeable article to very small specimens.

Waterford is undoubtedly the land of big squashes. Maurice Bicknell had one monster marked 40 pounds and another weighing 43 pounds. George H. Rice exhibited good looking potatoes, apples, cantaloupes and pumpkins. Arthur Proctor offered watermelon, carrots and beets. Albert Rice showed two varieties of bell peppers. Ella and Elizabeth Rice displayed a collection of potatoes.

B. B. Hersey & Son occupied space with a collection of pears, the varieties were Sheldon, Howell and Anjou. Isabel and Leslie Jones offered several pumpkins.

Canned blackberries, blueberries, peaches and corn looked good enough to eat and were put up by Mrs. George H. Rice. A collection of asters and verbenas shown by Mrs. C. A. Hersey had escaped frost and were fresh and attractive.

Supt. of Hall, R. M. McKeen, offered an attractive collection, including beets, carrots, turnips and potatoes. These specimens had been carefully selected from a large yield.

Salespeople occupied considerable space on either side of the entrance. Mr. and Mrs. Will Rice of Lewiston carried a large line of bead neck chains, jewelry and fancy work baskets. W. B. Dowling of Boston sold watch fobs, rings, bracelets and novelties. He engraved your name on pins when desired.

Directly outside the door a twin booth carried French filigree of the imported kind: bead chains, rugs and other brilliant decorations. Miss Scoville of Old Orchard and Helen Adams of Florida presided.

R. M. McKeen, president of the society for six years and superintendent of the hall for nine years, was in full charge of the exhibits.

Judges were P. M. Bartlett and S. M. Abbott. Premiums were cash and ribbons.

Feeding the Multitude
According to a custom established many years ago, the Ladies' Circle of the Congregational Church established victualing headquarters in their dining rooms in the church basement. This year they added breakfast and supper to their activities. Business was good Friday, and ahead of the first day averages. A land-slide hit them Saturday with a clamor for dinner before 10:30 in the forenoon. Just one continuous rush until mid afternoon.

Thanks to the keen foresight of the officers, Mrs. Edwin Jackson, Mrs. George Holt and Mrs. W. F. Perkins, a large supply of food was on hand and plenty of assistants to keep the tables loaded. The menu included baked beans, brown bread, white bread, doughnuts, pastry, pickles, coffee. Price was fifty cents, but no patron was allowed to leave with even a trace of hunger. C. A. Hersey, C. P. Saunders and Addison Millett were door men. They have officiated there many years and know the game.

Oyster stews for thirty-five cents with pastry, doughnuts and coffee on the European plan could be found in the Grange dining hall. These were served for dinner and supper and during intermission at the evening dances. Ladies in charge were Mrs. Susie Morse, Mrs. Effie Matterson and Mrs. Sadie Kimball. All brothers and sisters in the Waterford Grange assisted. Receipts from the patronage Friday squared expenses and Saturday's income was profit.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Ray served meals at "Rice's Tavern" well known for its generous bill of fare and hospitality. They did capacity business and forced to hand out a standing room sign.

Up and Down the Fun Trail
Not less than forty tents, booths and open air amusement places crowded the Square like sardines in a can. Practically all were lighted by electricity for a run Friday evening. Linwood Fogg of Norway wired the outfits and the Waterford Light and Power Co. furnished juice.

Toys, novelties, Jack-o-lanterns, balloons and the inevitable baby dolls were everywhere. Games of skill replaced the chance schemes and many were the devices to catch dimes. High strikers and bowling were there with James York and his father, Robert York, in charge. A chattering African dodger made merry and alluded a majority of the marksmen.

A rare combination was Henry Downs of Lewiston and Walter "Heinie" Blake of South Paris with "kitties" to be knocked down. Hooplas in various form with numerous prizes attracted the more sedate. Whirl-o-ball, a new game mounted on a motor truck, was played to the limit.

Harry Isaacson of Norway sold gents' furnishings from his motorized store. Ceylon Rowe & Son of Bethel with Ted Brown in charge, carried a large line of sweaters, cold weather coats and other clothing. A tent was headquarters for Maine grown wool, where men's trousers could be ordered for an early delivery. Another place featured army jenkins and just beyond was a rain coat emporium.

Looked pretty soft when the knife sharpener fakir did the trick. He made a raft of sales from the practical demonstrations. Two picture men corralled prospects and reaped a harvest with the black box on tilts.

Baby Thelma, the child mentalist, astonished the multitude with her act, considered by the credulous as a little short of supernatural. Tiny Tim, the smallest man in the world, and the smallest baby also were there. Even the "double child" side show was in full swing.

The merry-go-round did a land office business. Littlefield & Hatch were the proprietors and had fixed up the device since last year. Mrs. Hatch presided in the ticket office, Jack Stone collected on the wheel and alternated with Sid Hatch. Jesse Littlefield navigated the steam engine. Old and young enjoyed this feast of fun and the merry whirl was continuous, especially Saturday.

Homer Truman's athletic show boomed and was the headquarters for the sporting fraternity. Several local aspirants for honors went into the arena with the Maine champion. Prudent Bedard and Ernest McAllister were among the list to try for the "one dollar per minute" reward. This show has been successful at the fall fairs and will continue until the end.

Dingley & Fogg of Norway had a Kohler lighting plant on a truck, giving practical demonstrations. Linwood Fogg was in charge. A 1,000 C. P. Edison Mazda gas filled spot light, set in the cupola of the Congregational Church illuminated the grounds each evening. The Kohler outfit furnished the electricity. This has been seen at Cornish, Andover, Canton, Norway-So. Paris, Newry, Fryeburg and Welchville is the next stand.

Will Tweedell of Oxford had considerable frontage and sold a variety of fruit and cool soda. Harry Bridge, known far and near as "Bridge of Bridgton" sold all the corn he could pop. Next season he expects to introduce an electric popper with all the modern attachments.

Automobile dealers were on hand to display their products. The Paris Motor Mart with Alton Maxim showed several models of Chevrolet and others. Mack trucks were featured by the Norway Buick Co., with George H. Hill and Hugh J. McKinnon, Maine representative, to explain its new shock insulation feature. Meserve's garage had the Nash Six. W. F. Knight Co., Norway, made a fine showing with the Studebaker.

Jazzing and "Spasms"
Too hot weather for dancing under cover, but it mattered not. Crowds visited both halls and swelled. Orchestra and dancers peeled off their coats, collars and ties during the congestion Saturday afternoon. Utterly impossible to make powder and rouge stick and the poor dears were in a pack of trouble. Evenings were more agreeable and the merry whirl went on with more formality.

At the I. O. O. F. Hall dancing was in order Friday evening, Saturday afternoon and evening with crowds coming and going.

Shaw's four piece orchestra played. A. R. Brown and E. J. Jackson handled cash at the door and looked after affairs during the dances.

The "Spasms" in the Grange Hall under the management of Linwood Flint, called together capacity crowds. Someone suggested hooping the building Saturday afternoon, owing to the jam which literally caused the walls to bulge. Every body enjoyed the new rock maple floor, said to be the best dancing surface in town. Jazz music was furnished by Lin. Flint, violin and banjo, Harold Sanders, piano, and Millard Littlefield, drums. Bert Flint was at the door. This is the second year of dancing in this hall with a tremendous increase in business.

Random Pick-Ups and Comments
Rope swings in the school yard made one of the best free amusements during the fair. Children and many who had been children years ago enjoyed the sport.

A party of thirty-six students and teachers from Bridgton High School attended in a body. This was surely a jolly crowd out for a regular town fair time. They made the trip in a truck, driven by Everett Riley.

Sheriff Harry D. Cole, Deputy Sheriff Harry Stinson and other officers mingled with the throng with eyes open for gambling or other deviations from the law. (Continued on page 4)

Apparently everything was on the level for no serious trouble developed.

That experience is the best teacher was proven in the quiet manner seven hundred automobiles were guided safely from the lot Saturday night. Not many years ago this was a serious problem.

Norway-Paris band, sixteen pieces, with Allie Cota leader, played Saturday. They were located in the shade on the church lawn and the crowd around them numbered 11 m. until late in the afternoon. This is the first year since the Waterford band went out of existence, a brass horn organization has appeared to fill the gap. The music delighted all and a band should become a permanent feature. A fair is incomplete without it.

The sentimental age has not been absorbed by modern civilization. Couples strolling hand in hand and youths decorated with badges and trinkets were there. One young chap exploited a badge over his heart, which read "Chicken Inspector." The gallant fellow who had the moral courage to spend "five bucks" while winning a dazzling baby doll for his sweetheart, was also in evidence. Even the mechanical mouse at a dime each, captivated many supposed to be over the impressionable age, but the toy balloon on a string, on that was a clincher to make two hearts beat as one.

Mark Perry of Sweden, farmer, valuation assessor, lumberman, politician and all round good fellow roamed the grounds meeting acquaintances. "Came here 40 year ago when two hundred people and horse trotting was the whole story," he remarked.

Monologue overheard: "Taint what we used to have forty years ago. These new fangled didos can't touch the hoss races along the pine road in Lynchville. Give me the days of high sulkies and wish-bone nags fighting for a bag of oats. Every driver of it out there was a crowd immersed in something more conversation at than orange ade. Them was happy days."

Swapping horses was in order on the Lovell road behind the church. This is practically the only surviving relic of days before the show went into the World's Fair class.

Orrington M. Cummings of Norway mingled with the crowd Saturday and was keen for sport and fun. Although 84 years is checked against his account, he persists in informing his friends the correct age is 47.

Too hot for pulling matches. No entries for the horse pulling, Friday. After some labor two matches for cattle were arranged Saturday. Llewellyn Millett and E. B. Hersey & Son matched a pair of three year old steers, resulting in Millett making the longest pull. No measurements were taken. Charles Hersey's team of bulls split even with the winner after more load was put on the drag.

The Hersey bull team is a powerful outfit. Both bulls are registered and thoroughly broken to the yoke by Mr. Hersey. He used them on the farm for hard work. Beach Hill King is the Jersey and the Durham answers to the name "Fred."

Trips were made from Norway, Saturday by Merton McAllister and Ted Young. Both busses were well patronized. Private cars were loaded and Norway village was practically deserted Saturday afternoon. A crowd went over to the dances both evenings and had a good time.

"Largest crowd we ever fed" was the report from the door keepers at the Congregational church. They ought to know for this has been their job for many years. A careful observer estimates at least 300 tickets were sold Saturday.

J. W. Nason, an official in charge of finances, says: "The folks paid us over $200 and the midway was a large one. This is the first year within my memory Waterford fair has not been visited by rain or heavy overcoat weather."

HEBRON

Mrs. Frances Merrill Cross of Boston came here to attend the Kingsley-McMaster wedding in Rumford and is staying a short time with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Merrill.

LITTLE OLD BOSTON

Little old Boston still continues to hold forth rank as a metropolitan district by a good big margin in spite of all that has been said in recent years about being outgrown by the great cities of the West. As a matter of fact, in actual population Boston is still much larger than any city west of the Atlantic coast, with the exception of Chicago and is nearly double the size of St. Louis which is rated sixth as a municipality while Boston is pushed back to seventh place. These strange facts are accounted for because Boston's suburbs, containing more than 1,000,000 people are still independent municipalities and are not reckoned in the population of the city, while the western cities have annexed all adjoining districts possible. Rated as a metropolitan district the hub of New England is easily the fourth city of the nation in population as shown by the following statistics taken from the census figures of Metropolitan District Central City

SOUTH WATERFORD

Kimball-Tuttle

On Saturday, September 23rd, in Portland, occurred the marriage of P. Harold Kimball of this village and Genevieve Tuttle of Chatham, Mass.

The groom is the son of E. P. Kimball and received his education in the schools of Waterford and Bridgton Academy. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Tuttle of Chatham, Mass. She is a graduate of Chatham High School and Bridgewater Normal School and has been a successful teacher in Massachusetts and New Hampshire.

After a short wedding trip, the couple will make their home in this village. They have the best wishes of many friends for a long and happy future.

Mr. Whitehouse and family intend to spend their two weeks' vacation here later.

From all indications the radio promises to take its place ahead of the automobile, the victrola, modern sanitation facilities, electric lighting and power equipment, the wire telephone, etc., as a scientific development, calculated to make farm life at once more profitable and more alluring; and its inevitable tendency will be to hasten the solution of the perplexing problem of how to keep the young folks on the farm.—Atlanta Constitution.

Because of the objection to eliminating the word "obey" from the marriage services it has been suggested that the obligation be transferred from the woman to the man, as the latter knows, or will learn later, that he has to obey anyway.

MOTHERS AND DAUGHTERS

Read This Letter from Mrs. W. S. Hughes

Greenville, Del.—"I was under the impression that my eldest daughter had some internal trouble as ever since the first time she had to go to bed and even had to quit school once for a week. I always take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound myself so I gave it to her and she has received a great benefit from it. You can use this letter for a testimonial if you wish, as I cannot say too much about what your medicine has done for me and for my daughter."—Mrs. W. S. HUGHES, Greenville, Delaware.

Mothers and oftentimes grandmothers have taken and have learned the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. So they recommend the medicine to others.

The best test of any medicine is what it has done for others. For nearly fifty years we have published letters from mothers, daughters, and women, young and old, recommending the Vegetable Compound. They know what it did for them and are glad to tell others. In your own neighborhood are women who know of its great value.

Mothers—daughters, why not try it?

MRS. M. E. HOUSE WINS CASE

The Industrial Accident Commission has rendered a decision in favor of Mrs. Mary E. House of South Paris for compensation money to be paid on account of the death of her husband, Charles O. House, who died last May as the result of an accident when he was in the employ of the Merrill Springer Co. at Bethel, on April 13, 1922. The hearing was held at Bethel, September 14, 1922, the petitioner Mrs. House, being represented by Alton C. Wheeler, Esq., of South Paris, and the Merrill Springer Co. defending through the Federal Mutual Liability Insurance Co. which carried the insurance, was represented by Frederick W. Hinkley, Esq., of Portland.

The decree says: "The question to be determined in this case is, therefore, whether or not, based upon the facts as they appear from the evidence the petitioner was 'living apart (from her husband) for a justifiable cause—at the time of the accident.' We think she was."

It is found that on the date of the accident to Mr. House which resulted in his death, the petitioner, Mrs. Mary E. House was living apart from her husband for a justifiable cause and that, therefore, she is inclusively presumed to have been wholly dependent upon Charles O. House at the time of the injury and therefore entitled to compensation.

The formal portion of the decree is as follows: "It is therefore ordered and decreed, that the Merrill Springer Co. or its Insurance Carrier, the Federal Mutual Liability Insurance Co., pay to Mary E. House, dependent widow of Charles O. House, deceased employee of the Merrill Springer Co., compensation in the sum of $13.58 per week, commencing April 20, 1922, and continuing for a period not to exceed 300 weeks from the date of the injury, subject however, to the limitations provided in Section 12 of the Workmen's Compensation Act."

This figure $4,074.00, but the statute limits her to $4,000, so she got the full amount.

Mr. and Mrs. James Kimball and family were invited to the golden wedding reception of their brother, Moses Kimball and wife, recently held at their daughter's, Mrs. Avis Cook's, in Norway. They were unable to attend, but were the recipients of a generous portion of the elegant wedding cake.

Visit From Friends

Four cars came from West Durham, Sunday, loaded with friends and neighbors of J. P. Lord and family. They tried to find Mrs. E. K. Shedd, also one of their old neighbors, but didn't succeed for which she was very much disappointed. They called on Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Lord, and phoned Mrs. Shedd later. They ate dinner at Lake Penesseewassee, also took their tea there on their return home.

Those in the party were Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Davis and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Davis and family, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Marston and family, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Harmon and family, Mr. and Mrs. Harland Brown and family. All wish to see them again at no distant date.

Mrs. Leora Palmer, formerly of Lynchville, called on some of her old friends, Sunday. All were much pleased to see her.

A number of the school children were taken ill in school, Monday, at Bisbee town.

Marion Lord and Albert Arsenault went to Portland, Tuesday to attend the funeral of an aunt, Mrs. Almida Cobb. They carried Mrs. Mattie Sands with them. Mrs. Cobb being the only sister of Mrs. Sands' father, Nathaniel Thompson.

Mr. and Mrs. Zenas Mills and son Clayton visited at Oniel Mills', Sunday. They brought home the horse they had been using which belongs to Oniel.

The North Waterford Grange had wonderful success during both days of the Fair. They took in seventy-nine dollars for dancing alone. The returns from other things have not come in yet.

Mrs. Jessie Adams of Stoneham is caring for Mrs. Henry Durgin and daughter. Walter Lord went to Newry after one of his beef steers the first of the week.

Mr. and Mrs. William Fisk kindly invited Mrs. E. K. Shedd to a ride with them to the Fryeburg Fair, Tuesday. Mrs. Rebecca Fisk also went with them.

DADDY'S EVENING FAIRY TALE

by Mary Graham Bonner

THE FROGS.

"Ah," said Grandfather Frog, "the great time is at hand."

"What are you talking of, grandfather?" asked Mr. Felix Frog.

"I am talking of the great time which is soon to come," said Grandfather Frog. "The eggs were laid in the mud puddles and upon the mud banks where they would not roll off. And soon they will be hatched out and there will be gorgeous numbers of little ones—300, or so, all hatched out about the same time just here."

"Goog-a-room, goog-a-room, that is a glorious fact."

"It is indeed, goog-a-room, goog-a-room, it is indeed," said Mr. Felix Frog.

"Now there are the mud turtles," continued Grandfather Frog, "who bury themselves and catch what they can in the mud, they love the mud, too, they love it more than we do. They hardly stir from the mud when the little ones are still very little ones."

"The snapping turtles in their grassy, watery homes stretch out their long necks and with their hooked jaws they grab what they want to eat."

"Because of their hooked jaws they must swallow what they have reached for with their long necks. That is, they don't eat with their long necks, but their long necks help them to reach for the food and their jaws swallow it down."

"Of course, because of their jaws they can't chew."

"Old Mud Turtle, over yonder has been waiting for those eggs of hers to hatch out now for two weeks. In another week they will hatch out."

"We all like the spring of the year, too. But my history is so much more interesting than that of any of these other creatures."

"And so is mine," said Mr. Felix Frog.

"To be sure it is," said Grandfather Frog, "for you, too, are a frog. There is an egg first (I am taking one as a sample, for there are many eggs) and then a tadpole wriggles out of the jelly like case it is in and begins its life outside of the egg.

"It attaches itself near a nice water weed. Water reaches the gills through the mouth and that, of course, is after it has fed on plants and has begun to get its gills. Then the legs appear, hind ones first. That shows a frog is rather sensible, for hind legs are important to a frog's mind or to the body."

Grandfather Frog cleared his throat.

"Pray, continue," said Mr. Felix Frog. "I love to hear of our history over and over again even though I know it well myself."

"The lungs arrive after the gills," continued Grandfather Frog. Mr. Felix Frog laughed.

"You sound as though the trunks arrived after the hand luggage, the way you talk," he said. "But I enjoy it just the same."

Grandfather Frog blinked his eyes and went on.

"The leopard frog becomes a frog in a summer, but with the green bull frog it takes up into the second summer for him to become a full-fledged frog."

"We have catches like teeth in our mouths," he continued. "Our eggs are attached to twigs or other supports under the water and the eggs in the jelly are well protected for the jelly as you can easily understand is a protection. And there is the mud which we love, too, and which the eggs thrive near and in."

"Oh, dear," said Grandfather Frog. "I would be most unhappy if we ever should become frogs right away without having all these interesting experiences first, such as being in jelly and then being tadpoles and all of the fascinating things which frogs do before they become frogs. It is so much more interesting than to become a frog at once."

"Ah, well," said Mr. Felix Frog, "we will always do these things—all frogs will—and the history of the frogs will always continue, for it is such an honor to be a frog that one wants to work up to it in degrees."

"True, true," said Grandfather Frog, "and I know the family will never change its ways, goog-a-room, goog-a-room."

Made Dorothy Tired.

Small Dorothy was very restless the other night and was unable to go to sleep. Finally she said: "Papa, please sleep to me; that always makes me tired."

We admit women are wonderful. They can speak fluently on any subject.

SAYS IT MADE A NEW PERSON OF HIM

Thousands of people needlessly endure a half-sick, nervous, rundown condition when they might enjoy sturdy, robust health and all its manifold blessings if they only knew what to do. People in this condition find Tanlac soon ends their trouble and builds up abundance of strength, energy and vitality. William R. Therrien, 55 Birch St., Lewiston, Me., says:

"For two years my whole system was run down, nothing I ate agreed with me, and I had such headaches and pains in my back I could hardly work. Two bottles of Tanlac made me feel like a brand new man and I never have an ache or pain now. Tanlac did my brother a world of good, too."

Nervousness and a run down, tired-out feeling are but symptoms of a hidden cause, which usually lies in the stomach. Tanlac enables you to digest your food properly and eliminate waste, helps you regain your old time strength and vigor. Get a bottle today at any good druggist's.

WHY ENVY A KING?

Take away all our machinery and steam and electrical power, and it would require 3,000,000,000 hard-working slaves to duplicate the work done by Americans. The use of power and machinery gives to every man, woman and child in our country the equivalent of 30 slaves. This is figured out in a bulletin of the Smithsonian Institution.

Why envy the nobleman, back in ancient Egypt or Bagdad, with 30 slaves toiling for him? He had swift running slaves bringing him fish from the ocean and birds' tongues from the mountains. Today, with a few dimes, you can get a tin can of shrimp brought from Japan, a package of dates from Syria, a bag of nuts from Brazil, sardines from Norway. Your slaves—machinery and power—bring them.

For a few cents you can buy enough matches to start 1,000 fires. When the ancient nobleman's fire was doused by rain, he shivered in the cold until slaves made a blaze by friction or brought fire-brands from afar.

Plenty of old settlers now living, can recall the days before matches, when they ran a mile from the nearest neighbor's with a shovelful of blazing coals.

Your real wealth is measured not in money, but in a number of things you obtain to eat and wear, the ease with which you get them, the comforts and conveniences of your home, methods of transportation and amusement.

It is only a few centuries since even the richest kings had no sewers, running water, rapid transportation or any of the commonplace things that brighten the lives of all today. Each year adds to our comforts and conveniences. A few years ago only the richest men in town had autos. Now there's an auto for every 12 Americans. Henry Ford is experimenting with a mixture of glue, cotton and formaldehyde. He expects to make a powerful building material out of these. If he succeeds, he'll stamp flivvers out like doughnuts.

That seems like a dream, but it is merely typical of the processes of mass production that have given the average person luxuries that were denied the kings of antiquity.

Measured in ancient standards, we are all kings today, with the slaves of electricity, steam and machinery toiling constantly for us.—Berlin Reporter.

SOIL IMPROVEMENT

Farmers everywhere will be interested in an announcement by the Soil Improvement Committee of the National Fertilizer Association, of a plan which has for its object the development of a constructive soil-fertility program in every county of every state. The statement of the plan, which seems to be a sound and forward looking one, urges upon the County Agents, the importance not only of building up the fertility of their soils, but also of a definite program which shall take into account every factor which might affect the successful agricultural development of their counties.

If you work for the average woman you have to earn every cent that is coming to you.

JONES, BRIDGTON'S POSTMASTER

Howard W. Jones, Bridgton's new postmaster, is a native of Fryeburg, but has resided in Bridgton for the past 15 years, during which period he has been engaged in the grocery business. He succeeds Frank P. Davis, whose term expired Sept. 28.

Mr. Jones is a prominent member of the Masonic bodies, Oxford Lodge, Oriental Royal Arch Chapter, and Oriental Commandery of Bridgton, Oxford Council of Norway, and Kora Temple of Lewiston. His appointment is a popular one and he is receiving letters of congratulations from many friends outside the town.

Progress Being Made

At the executive committee meeting of the Farm Bureau held Monday, President W. H. Conant called for reports from each county leader. L. E. McIntire, county dairy leader, reported a very valuable demonstration on silage corn which has carried this year. Mr. McIntire said that five varieties of corn had been planted in order to determine the best one to plant. Careful weighing and estimating by county Agent Lovejoy and Mr. Bole, manager of the farm, had shown the New York flint corn, recommended by the Farm Bureau, much superior to the other varieties. Mr. McIntire also reported among other things, that four silos built for demonstration purposes had saved the owners a total of over $500.

C. F. Tripp, crops leader, gave an interesting report of lime, oats and potato demonstration. In speaking of the potato work being done through the bureau, Mr. Tripp stated that E. C. Buzzell, the vice-president, had secured a yield of nearly 300 bushels per acre this year from the certified seed whereas last year Mr. Buzzell's crop was an entire failure due to disease. Mr. Tripp believes that the potato seed project will mean the saving of thousands of dollars to the farmers of the country.

Wilson Morse, accounts leader, gave an interesting report on the accounts work and stated that twice as many farmers were keeping accounts this year as there were last year. Poultry leader, G. C. Record, reported on the culling work; and the reports of the county leaders of the women's division showed remarkable accomplishments in the food, clothing and household management work just started this year. These projects are in charge of Mrs. C. B. Curtis, Mrs. A. A. Bumpus and Mrs. W. H. Heald, respectively; and Miss Anita Nicholson is before the meeting, adjourned plans had been made for the annual meeting at South Paris, Oct. 23, and for a big program of work for 1923 to be recommended at that time. The 1923 budget was also drawn up.

Board of Trade Elect Officers The South Paris Board of Trade held its annual meeting Tuesday evening and elected officers as follows:

Pres.—George H. Eastman.
Vice Pres.—Clarence G. Morton.
2nd Vice Pres.—Robert W. Wheeler.
Sec.—Dr. Chester Merrill.
Treas.—Ernest Tuttle.

A special town meeting Saturday, Oct. 7 will vote on maintaining a school in the Mountain district. There are not enough scholars to legally continue without a special vote.

Paris High school eleven met defeat at North Bridgton, Saturday, when the heavy weights of Bridgton Academy pulled off two touchdowns and closing with a 12 to 00 score. Pretty rough game is the general report with numerous injuries in its make.

George Stevens, son of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Stevens, was brought home from the Central Maine General hospital late Wednesday afternoon. He has been under treatment several weeks for injuries sustained when his bicycle collided with an automobile. His recovery has been slow owing to a peculiar fracture in legs below the knees.

Ruth G. Miller has returned to Philadelphia for her senior year in the Philadelphia School of Design for Women. She will also take a course in the University of Pennsylvania for a degree in that institution.

Mrs. William P. Morton tripped on a rug at her home Sunday forenoon and fell seriously injuring her right arm. Physicians advised an X-ray to determine the extent of the injury. She went to the C. M. G. hospital Sunday afternoon and remained until the photographic plate was developed and studied. Fracture near the collar bone and elbow were found and she will stay there at least a week.

The headquarter of Oxford County Farm Bureau has just been changed from the county building to an office in the new Odd Fellows' building. The change was made necessary by the lengthening of the period of occupation of the court house office by the grand jury. The business men of South Paris showed their appreciation of Farm Bureau work by offering to pay $200.00 toward the yearly cost of renting the new office, making it necessary for the Bureau to pay only $200.00.

The annual harvest supper was served by the ladies of Social Union in the Universalist dining hall Tuesday evening. A large crowd attended and remained to the sociable which followed.

Rally week is being observed at Deerfield Memorial Methodist Church. On Wednesday evening topic was "Teaching Children to Live." On Thursday, a meeting of the parents and teachers will be held to discuss home co-operation and home religion; on Friday evening there will be a young people's social; on Saturday afternoon a children's story and play hour. Sunday, Oct. 8, will be observed as Rally Sunday in all departments of the church. The subject of the pastor's sermon will be "Jesus, the Great Teacher."

Rev. and Mrs. Dwight F. Faulkner of Gorham are visiting friends here. At present they are guests of Mr. and Mrs. E. O. Millett.

Dr. and Mrs. Merle Webber and son George of Portland were guests for the week end of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph B. Penfold.

Central Maine Power Co. have a crew changing the light and power lines in the corporation. A more substantial system is being installed to meet the increase in service. Several months will be needed to complete the work.

Harry McGinley, aged 12, son of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. McGinley, fell from a tree a distance of nearly ten feet and escaped with only a severe shaking. He was gathering beech nuts and a limb broke, throwing him backwards to the ground.

Ralph Chapman of North Paris has employment at the Mason Manufacturing Co. He expects to move his family here the last of the week into the Wyman house on Hill street.

Porter District C. H. Bryant and wife of Auburn visited at W. E. Bryant's recently.

J. M. Holden has been at work for C. T. Shortridge the past week.

W. E. Bryant and wife, accompanied by C. H. Bryant of Auburn called at O. H. Schooler in Milton, Wednesday, Sept. 20.

Okher opened her 11th under the continued instruction of Miss Ruth E. Thurlow of South Paris. The attendance for the week ending Sept. 15 was 100 per cent. Those having 100 per cent.

TAXATION AND HIGH COST OF LIVING

Price of gas and electricity cut in Lynn Flour prices rule lower.—News Item. This is worthy of chronicling as the general range of prices is upward.—Comment.

We don't like to say, "We told you so," but it will be recalled that months ago we predicted, when the coal strike was finally settled, the consumers would get no relief from exorbitant prices and that the operators and miners would make up for loss of time in increased prices and wages. We also stated that the President would doubtless veto the bonus bill which would be sustained by the Senate. All of which has come to pass.

There is quite a little satisfaction that we have struck the nail on the head without a single miss so far.

It will be noted by the curious for future reference that the three Maine congressmen, who voted in the House for the bonus bill, were conveniently absent when it became necessary to vote to sustain or oppose the President's admirable veto.

The election in Maine showed that the men who favored the bonus were cut several thousands of votes. The measure grows less and less popular everywhere.

Too much cannot be done for the disabled war soldiers, the others should wait for the restoration of normal conditions and the period when pensions can begin to be paid. Pensions are far better than bonuses.

A tariff bill has become a law. Bloos and special interests have largely had their way, in framing many of its provisions. New England interests and the consumer generally have been disregarded. The people will ultimately come to see that the only way to give satisfaction to the great mass of the people and a permanent measure is to have constructed on a scientific basis.—Comment.

The Boston tax rate is the same as last year, $24.70 on $1,000. The average tax rate in Massachusetts is $27.11. In Manchester by the Sea it is only $13.50. In Hopdale and Gosnold it is still lower—but $10 on a thousand.—News Item.

Some people think it would pay to send the municipal officers of some Maine towns into certain places in Massachusetts to summer schools for instruction in municipal management. That isn't a bad idea. Better than than commission government.—Comment.

Elihu Root says that Congress should pass laws prohibiting strikes which "cut off the supply of food, for service necessary to the life of the community."—News Item.

Good, it's a fine time to begin the movement to that end. Strikes will be recognized as no proper way to settle difficulties. All difficulties and disagreements between employers and employees should be settled by boards established for the purpose and the courts. When one quits a job, he should stay quit and not interfere with the one who is willing to take his place to earn an honest living. This is the essence of justice and liberty of action under the law in a free government such as ours.—Comment.

In northern Vermont recently, granulated sugar was selling at 9 cents a pound at the stores. On the same day it could be bought in Boston at eight pounds for 50 cents, or 6 1-4 cents a pound, the Vermont price being 44 per cent. above the Boston price. It was possible, at that time, to buy the sugar in Boston at a cost of 50 cents, attach 13 cents in postage stamps to the package, and have 8 pounds of sugar delivered at the home, four miles from a postoffice in northern Vermont, at a cost of 63 cents, or 9 cents less than the Vermont farmer would have to pay at the store, four miles distant, for the same eight pounds of sugar. This illustrates what the combination of high freight rates and profiteering is doing to those who live on the back country farms.—Boston Transcript.

An electrical device has been invented to make angleworms come up out of the earth to be eaten by chickens. Two brass rods pushed into the ground each connected by wire with an ordinary telephone magneto, constitute the simple machine. When the handle of the magneto is twisted, the earth between the rods is loosened and the worms are literally shocked out of the ground.

NORWAY AND VICINITY

Family Reunion

Sunday, Sept. 24, a family reunion was held by the Chas. Wentzel family at Gibson's Grove. A picnic dinner was served at noon and a very enjoyable day was spent by all.

Those present were Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Wentzel, Carlton Wentzel, Mr. and Mrs. Roy White and five sons, of Norway, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Wentzel and son of Auburn, Chas. E. Wentzel and two daughters of Litchfield, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Wentzel and son of Addison, and Mrs. Herbert Thompson of Detroit, Mich.

Office Force Held Get-Together
Male employees in Norway post-office enjoyed a dinner and social time at Beals Tavern, Thursday evening. The affair was entirely informal with an hour for chatting and story telling.

Those present were post-master Frank E. Decoster; rural carriers John P. Judkins and Fred H. Perry; city carriers W. A. Lewis and Eugene Descoeteau; clerk Philip F. Stone; and sub-clerk Paul F. Hosmer.

In an interesting way Mr. Judkins told his experiences during the past twenty-two years on the R. F. D. service, or since its establishment here. Once on a time a motorcycle was used in summer on his route. Business increased rapidly and an auto replaced it.

Mr. Perry has been carrier many years and recalled the time he toured his route on a bicycle with all mail in a small pouch. He also uses an auto for his deliveries.

At the conclusion of the get-together Mr. Descoeteau on behalf of the office force presented Mr. Decoster a travelling bag. Although taken by surprise the post-master responded happily.

Trains Changed Time

The Grand Trunk passenger service changed Sunday to the four train schedule. Branch train is on the following time daily except Sunday.

Leave at 9:20 A. M., connecting with train going East and West. Arrive from South Paris 9:45 A. M.

Leave at 5:40 P. M. for express to Portland. Arrive at 5:59 P. M.

Leave at 7:10 P. M. for train to Gorham, Island Pond and points West. Arrive 7:30 P. M.

Freeman C. Smith's family moved Friday from the rent over the Wm. C. Leavitt & Co. to the cottage recently purchased in Cummings' Place.

Low places on Fair street opposite Chas. E. Brackett's and Leland Corbett's places have been filled with material removed from the road side near the junction of Winter street.

Irving Witham and Philip Decoteau have employment at the Mason Mfg. Co., South Paris.

Mr. and Mrs. V. W. Hills returned from Waldoboro, Thursday, where they had been called by the death of Mrs. Hills' brother, Barden Turner. Mr. Turner had been in failing health due to kidney trouble for some time but the end came very suddenly. Mr. Turner has been a frequent visitor in Norway.

Mrs. Simeon Harriman and her uncle, Geo. W. Herrick, left Saturday for Portland to make it their home with Dep. Simeon Harriman. Mrs. Harriman always lived here being a successful teacher in our schools for many years. Mr. Herrick will be succeeded in the carpentry, being a first-class carpenter, many coming to him for advice. He has worked for Prof. C. A. Stephens for nearly 37 years. He will be greatly missed as he has many friends both old and young.

Mr. Harriman since taking his position as Deputy Marshal has met with excellent success, liking his work very much. We much regret their leaving town.

Z. L. Merchant returned Monday from the Central Maine General Hospital and has been in his store several hours each day. He will be unable to handle the larger part of the business for at least two weeks. Mrs. Merchant was at the hospital Sunday and returned with him.

Addie Longley is pursuing a special course in Gould's Academy at Bethel. She is boarding at the dormitory.

Grace Scott, a worker and lecturer in the Women's Christian Temperance Union, addressed the boys and girls separately at Norway High School Monday afternoon. Her subject was clean living and thinking with an informal talk on social evils and their remedy. Miss Scott was a Y. M. C. A. singer in France during the war. After the armistice, she remained to work among the girls of France.

H. A. Christensen of this town is holding public gospel services every Sunday afternoon at 5 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Thomas Johnson, Gary St., Oxford Park.

Mr. and Mrs. Stonie Andrews have returned from Portland and are employed in the Carroll, Jellerson Co. factory. They have leased of Mrs. Bertha Young the rent in Mrs. Julia Horne's house.

Linnwood Flint and party from Waterford were in town Monday evening for business and pleasure.

Mr. and Mrs. Wallace W. Sheen of Limerick were in town Sunday, calling on acquaintances.

Improvements in the Norway station yard continue, heavy rails have been laid on the main track and the road bed raised some eight inches. Both freight sidings are changed to heavier steel and the track raised. The long siding leading to the C. B. Cummings & Sons Co. grain mill will be lifted twelve inches and the whole space in the square filled and graded to a higher level. A new iron split rail switch has replaced the wooden affair, a roller of railroad iron some five years old. Probably this antique is one of the last of that type on this division.

CONDENSED CLASSICS

A TALE OF TWO CITIES

By CHARLES DICKENS

Condensation by Miss Sara A. Hamlin

Charles John Dickens was born Feb. 7, 1812, at Porten, England. After where his father was a clerk in the navy pay office, he died at Gadshill Place, in Kent, on June 9, 1870.

His dream of writing came to him early when as a boy he read breathlessly the battered novels in his father's library. He became a reporter on the London newspapers. After his father's death (1835), "Sketches by Boz," wherein are, in miniature, all the abundant virtues of his novels.

The "Pickwick Papers" (1837) were a real success. A half a century later, "Nicholas Nickleby" (1838-39), "Old Curiosity Shop" and "Barnaby Rudge" (1840-41) were produced. "The Mystery of Edwin Drood" (1870), being unfinished. "David Copperfield" (1849-50), held by many to be his masterpiece, and by not a few to be the greatest story ever written, is supposed to be semi-autobiographical. Many of his novels were published in installments, and never before or since has any literary publication excited such a furore.

After his father's death, Dickens' life was a triumphal procession, saddened only by domestic unhappiness. He visited America, where his works were even more popular than in England, in 1842 and 1843-44.

He wrote in his will his own best epitaph: "I rest my claims to the remembrance of my country on my published works." He rests well, having substituted "the world" for "my country."

Perhaps the quality that distinguishes his novels among all others is their abounding humor.

On a cold November night, in the year 1775, the English mail coach, on its way from London to Dover, was carrying among its passengers a Mr. Jarvis Lorry, a London banker of the well-known firm of Telford & Co. As the coach stumbled along in the darkness, there arose before him the vision of an emaciated figure with hair prematurely white.

All night between him and the spectre the same words repeated themselves again and again. "Buried how long?" "Almost eighteen years." "I hope you care to live?" "I can't say."

About eighteen years before the story opens, Dr. Manette, a prominent young physician of Paris, had suddenly disappeared. Everything was done to discover some trace of him, but in vain. The loss of her husband caused his wife such anguish that she resolved to bring up her little daughter in ignorance of her father's fate; and when in two years she died, she left the little Lucie under the guardianship of Telford & Co., to whose care Dr. Manette for many years had entrusted his financial affairs.

Strange tidings concerning the Doctor had just come from Paris, and Mr. Lorry was on his way to meet his word, and explain to her the facts of her early life. "This was a duty from which the kind-hearted banker shrunk, and when he saw the slight golden-haired girl who came to meet him, his heart almost failed him; but his task was accomplished at last.

"And now," concluded Mr. Lorry, "your father has been found. He is alive, greatly changed, but alive. He has been taken to the house of a former servant in Paris, and we are going there. I to identify him, you to restore him to life and love."

The servant that sheltered Dr. Manette was a man by the name of Defarge who, with his wife, kept a wine-shop in the obscure district of St. Antoine. The banker and Lucie were taken to an attic where a haggard, white-haired man sat on a low bench, making shoes, a wreck of a man, oblivious of all around him.

Again was the Channel crossed, and again the old inquiry whispered in the ear of Jarvis Lorry: "I hope you care to be recalled to life?"

"I can't say."

Five years later, in the court room of the Old Bailey in London, a young Frenchman was on trial for his life. Near him sat an untidy looking individual by the name of Sydney Carton. With his eyes fixed on the ceiling, he was unobservant, apparently, of all that passed around him; but it was he, who, first noticing the extraordinary resemblance between the prisoner and himself, rescued Charles Darnay from the web of deceit which had been spun around him.

Between these two young men, the striking resemblance was in outward appearance only. Charles Darnay was of noble birth; but his ancestors had for many years so cruelly oppressed the French peasantry that the name of Evremonde was hated and despised. Wholly unlike them in character, this last descendant of his race had given up his name and estate, and had come to England as a private gentleman, eager to begin life anew.

Sydney Carton was a young English lawyer, brilliant in intellect, but sensually deteriorating through his life of dissipation, able to advise others but unable to guide himself, "conscious of the blight on him and resigning himself to let it eat him away."

He and Darnay soon became frequent visitors at the small house in Soho square, the home of Dr. Manette and his daughter. Through Lucie's care and devotion, the Doctor had almost wholly recovered from the effects of his long imprisonment, and it was only in times of strong excitement that any trace of his past insanity could be detected. The sweet face of Lucie Manette soon won the hearts of both the young men, but it was Darnay to whom she gave her love.

And so that interview between Lucie and Sydney Carton has a pathos that wrings our hearts. He knew that even if his love could have been returned, it would have added only to his bitterness and sorrow, for he felt it would have been powerless to lift him from the slough of selfishness and sensuality that had engulfed him. But he could not resist this last sad confession of his love; and when she weeps at the sorrow of which she has been the innocent cause, he implores: "Do not weep, dear Miss Manette; the life I lead renders me unworthy of your pure love. My last supplication is this: Think now and then that there is a man who would give his life to keep a life you love beside you."

But dark days were to come. In the year 1789 the down-trodden French peasantry turned upon their oppressors. The streets of Paris were filled with crowds of people whose agony cry was for "blood." Madame Defarge no longer sat behind the counter of her small wine shop, silently knitting into her work the names of her hated enemies, but axe in hand and knife at her belt, headed a frenzied mob of women on to the Bastille. The French Revolution had actually begun.

Madame Defarge was one of the leading spirits of the Revolution. Early in life she had seen her family fall victims to the tyranny and lust of the cruel nobility and from that time her life had been devoted to revenge.

Three years of crime and bloodshed passed, and in 1792 Mr. Jarvis Lorry and Charles Darnay landed in Paris, the former to visit his friend, the French branch of Telford & Co., and the latter to befriend an old family servant who had besought his help. Not until they had set foot in Paris did they realize into what a caldron of fury they had plunged. Mr. Lorry, on account of his business relations, was allowed his freedom, but Darnay was hurried at once to the prison of La Force, there to await his trial. The reason given for the outrage was the new law for the arrest of all returning French emigrants, but the true cause was that he had been recognized as Charles Evremonde.

These tidings soon reached London, and Dr. Manette, with his daughter Lucie, hastened to Paris, for he felt sure that his long confinement in the prison would react upon him the sympathy of the French people, and thus enable him to save his son-in-law. Days and months passed, and although the Doctor succeeded in gaining a promise that Darnay's life should be spared, the latter was not allowed to leave his prison.

At last came the dreadful year of the Reign of Terror. The sympathy which at first had been given to Dr. Manette had become weakened through the influence of the bloodthirsty Madame Defarge. Also, there had been found in the ruins of the Bastille a paper which contained Dr. Manette's account of his own abduction and imprisonment, and pronouncing a solemn curse upon the House of Evremonde and their descendants, who were declared to be the authors of his eighteen years of misery. Charles Darnay's doom was sealed. "Back to the Conciergerie and death within twenty-four hours."

To Sydney Carton, who had followed his friends to Paris, came an inspiration. Had he not promised Lucie that he would die to save a life she loved? By bribery, he gains admittance to the prison; Darnay is removed unconscious from the cell, and Carton sits down to await his fate.

Along the Paris streets six tumblers are carrying the day's wine to la guillotine. In the third car sits a young man with his hands bound. As the cries from the street arise against him they only move him to a quiet smile as he shakes more loosely his hair about his face.

Crash! A head is held up and the knitting women who are ranged about the scaffold count "One."

The third cart comes up and the supposed Evremonde descends. His lips move, forming the words, "a life you love."

The murmuring of many voices, the upturning of many faces, then all flashes away.

"Twenty-three!"

"I am the resurrection and the life, saith the Lord; he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live; and whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die."

WILSON'S MILLS

Clarence Fox and a party of eight visited his brother, C. T. Fox, on Azigoos mountain, Sunday.

Home Boardman of Lowell, Mass., with D. S. Fox as guide has gone on a ten days' camping trip across Azigoos lake.

C. T. Fox has finished his summer duties as fire warden and expects to spend a short time at Saints' Rest with W. B. Garfield, who is expected soon. A meeting of the Fish and Game Association was held at the hotel, Saturday evening.

Epstein was in town, Saturday, with his usual line of dry goods.

A church social was held at Arthur Littlefield's, Saturday evening, and was well attended.

Mrs. Claude Linnell and children spent Sunday with Mrs. S. S. Bennett, who remains about the same.

South Franklin, Vt.

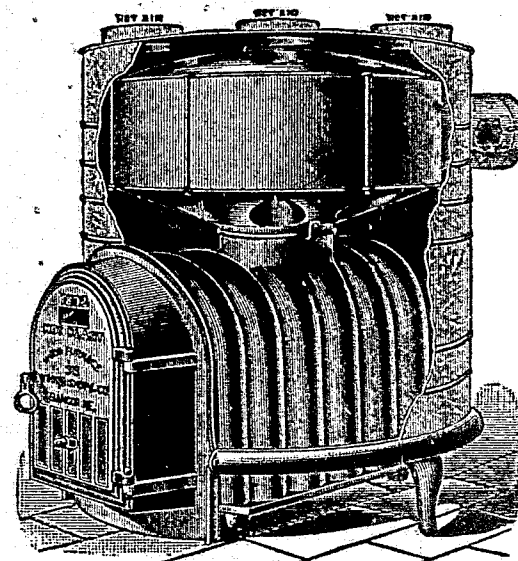

The NO. 38 WOOD FURNACE which was set in our church at South Franklin, Vt., in 1886 is in good condition at the present time and is giving perfect satisfaction every season; likewise the WOOD FURNACE of same size set in my house in 1885.

Thirty-five and thirty-six years of performance and still going strong.

This is Why

Fire box all cast iron, very heavy, body corrugated and in one piece, with no joints to open—practically indestructible.

Radiator made of heavy plate steel with heavy cast iron heads. Radiating surface very large by reason of its six-five inch hot air flues. Joint between radiator and body is a deep cup—perfectly smoke tight. Radiation direct and enormous from even a light fire. The cold air enters at bottom from cellar or outdoors, rises on all sides and through the hot air flues, becoming intensely hot before passing into the hot air pipes.

NOTICE!

From the above cut that the fire box is low—to save lifting the wood. It is long enough to take four foot cord wood sawed once for economy. The door is large enough to take whole junks which saves splitting.

There is no wood grate, the wood burns on the ashes same as in a cook stove, with draft on the fire line—the most practical, economical way. The fire box is large enough to keep a fire all night without attention.

An appeal to common sense

If you plan to burn wood for economy and comfort's sake, use a furnace that is made and proven to be the right furnace for burning wood. The Wood & Bishop Furnaces are furnaces of great power, and simple, durable construction at moderate cost.

REPORT OF MAINE W. C. T. U. WORK

Mrs. Annie M. R. Barnes of Houlton in her report on the Child Welfare work of the Maine W. C. T. U. showed how the interest in the Child Welfare work is gaining all over the State, all over the Nation, and all over the world. She said "Our best crop the children, to develop perfectly, should have the best that science and skill can give."

Mrs. Barnes said that Mrs. Elizabeth Perkins of Augusta, national W. C. T. U. superintendent of Child Welfare has worked out a wonderful plan for such development, having learned from practical experience, and has produced the following general plan covering every phase of child training under the following head, the right of every child to be well born, to be educated, to be protected from Child Labor, to be spiritually trained, to be morally safeguarded.

Special features of this plan are the work of the big sisters, child study groups and rest tents at fairs, the making of layettes for expectant mothers, the tying of white ribbon on babies' wrists to make them white ribbon recruits, mothers' meetings, the story hour at twilight, baby clinics, tactful distribution of literature, the work of the boy scouts, campfire girls, pageants, and other group activities. Mrs. Barnes stated that she had lectured on these plans in fourteen towns and cities and that baby clinics and exhibits at fairs has been an important part of the year's work. There was a child welfare and baby week in Houlton in July and exhibits as well as social morality will be featured in the department this year. The report stated that anyone wishing information and help in child welfare work may write to Mrs. Annie M. R. Barnes, Superintendent Child Welfare, Houlton, Maine.

LOVELL

George Marston
George Marston of this town passed away at his home, Sunday, Sept. 3. Mr. Marston was born in Waterford in 1850. Living there until 1878, he came to Lovell and soon after built a house and stable over the river where he has lived since. He was a Past Grand of Kezar Valley Lodge, a member of Lake Kezar Encampment I. O. O. F. and belonged to Delta Lodge F. and A. M. and Delta Chapter O. E. S. He leaves a wife and one daughter Mrs. H. D. Stone of Sweden. Delta Lodge attended the funeral at his late home and he was laid at rest in Bissetown, Waterford, by the brothers of Delta Lodge. He will be greatly missed in this community as he was a man who always had some good thing to say of his neighbor.

James Kilgore, Jr., is finishing off the stone steps for the school building. W. I. Stover is at work for Mrs. Ring at No. 8.

The Sunday school started Sunday after the summer vacation. It meets at 10:30.

Delta Chapter O. E. S. will have a harvest supper, Oct. 14.

L. W. Severance has returned to Worcester, Mass., after a week in town. His mother returned with him.

The postoffice moved to the new building, Stearns & Kimball store, the entrance is from Church street and one can go over or around the hay scaler just as he pleases.

E. L. Bennett of Brownfield and Wm. Sanborn of Stow are plastering the schoolhouse. E. J. Wells has moved to Bridgton. He will work in the mills there.

Lots of people from Lovell went to the World's Fair. O, my, what a crowd! You could stand by the church and look down on two acres of automobiles parked in a field. All roads were lined with them and all door yards were full, and people there was no end of them. Paris and Norway band furnished the music and the ladies of North Waterford furnished fine dinners. Baked beans and pumpkin pies like Mother used to make. Will meet you there in 1923.

Dr. C. Hubbard of Vero, Florida, formerly a successful physician in Lovell, after spending the summer months with his family at his cottage on the shore of Lake Kezar, has, with Mrs. Hubbard, returned to their home in Vero. Dr. Hubbard had not been in Maine for nearly seven years, and he enjoyed the summer very much, visiting and entertaining old friends.

TOOLS THAT ANALYZE THE HEAVENS

The recent success in wresting some of the secrets from the stella or sidereal world must be credited to the very rapid development of astronomical appliances and the allied sciences such as the investigation of the physical laboratory of the electron and the atom, both under high temperatures, pressure and electrical excitement.

Those skilled in solving problems in the laboratory, may justly claim their share of the glory and honor with the observer, spectroscopist and the photographer, in all that has been revealed and accomplished. The following are the indispensable instruments, telescope, spectroscope, interferometer and bolometer.

Telescopes

The following are of the largest telescopes in America and of the world. There are two kinds, refracting and reflecting. The refracting telescopes are of the common kind with two concave-convex lenses, one of flint glass and crown glass for objective lens. The reflecting telescope has a mirror for the objective, situated at the eye end of the instrument. This mirror which is concave, converges the direct rays to a focus, in the way up the lattice tube where either a 45 degree lens projects the image at one side of the lattice tube and is magnified by the eye piece, or the mirror converges the rays to a focus on a convex lens which returns them back through a hole in the mirror to a focus in front of the eyepiece.

The refracting instruments: Wisconsin University 15 1/2"; Warner Observatory 16"; Cincinnati 16"; Amherst 18"; Northwestern Observatory 18 1/2"; Denver University 20"; Princeton University 22"; Lowell at Flagstaff, Ari. 24"; University of Virginia 20"; Washington 26". The Lick telescope is 36". This observatory which is on Mt. Hamilton near San Francisco, was founded by the generosity of James Lick, a wealthy Californian. The largest refractor is the Yerkes, 40" dedicated in 1897 at Green Bay, Wis., near University of Chicago. This was the inception of Mr. Yerkes, a wealthy manufacturer. Of the reflectors are the Bruce photographic telescope of 24"; 2 Harvard University 24"; each. The Lowell observatory of Flagstaff, 40" which has been used for the observation of Mars.

All of these instruments were made by The Alva Clark & Son of Cambridge, Mass., or the objective lens were made by them.

Of the very largest reflectors in the world, the 60" is at Mount Wilson observatory near Pasadena, Cal. This observatory founded in 1904 through the munificence of Andrew Carnegie, in use since 1908, under direction of Dr. H. L. Mitchell but now of George E. Hale. A still larger reflector, 72", and built by John A. Brashear & Co. optical, and Warner & Swasey Co. mechanical parts, is situated near Victoria, B. C., J. S. Plaskett is its director. This is especially fitted for spectroscopic and photographic work.

The king of them all is the 100" reflector known as the "Hooker" telescope and is also mounted at Mt. Wilson. This 8 1/2 foot monster mirror was ground and figured by the observatory force at Pasadena. John D. Hooker was the donor of the optical parts. The 100" mirror collects three times as much light as the 60" and has 2.5 times more power.

Now comes the report that Charles S. Frye, a wealthy capitalist of Seattle, Wash., is to have a 120" (12 foot) reflector built by T. S. H. Shearman, a Canadian who claims to have a secret process whereby the making of this immense mirror can be done in a much shorter time. If this is successful, by photographic process, this ought to reveal stars of the 22d magnitude. If this telescope reaches beyond the stars in space already known, it would seem that Einstein's belief in the finite limit of worlds, is not well founded so far as research is concerned.

The first telescope used for astronomical purposes in the United States, was set up at Yale College in 1830.

The Spectroscope

The rays of light from any object enters the large end of a telescope, through a narrow slit or shutter. These rays being converged, are received on either a grating or a prism or train of prisms. The prism or wedge shaped glass causes some of the light rays to travel further than others, or allow more vibrations through the thin part of the wedge than through the thick part. This spreads or disperses the combined light colors into what is called a spectrum, which are colors laid side by side, always in their proper order, red, orange, yellow, green, blue, violet. The more the glass is tilted the wider each color band becomes and with a train of prisms the color bands are increased in width and fade into each other.

Now with stops to eliminate the cross rays of light, it was discovered that the lines lay parallel within each color band, singly, in pairs, and in groups. Discovered by Fraunhofer, these lines are called "Fraunhofer lines." Kirchhoff saw the value of this phenomenon and carried the study along until now it has been developed to a very high degree.

When the spectrum is projected on a screen, a scale of measurement is laid along its edge. The units of measure are called Angstroms. Now if sodium (or common salt) is sprinkled on a burner, it will give off a vapor, this vapor illuminated will cause two bright lines which are very close to each other to take their exact places on the scale. Whether this vapor is in the laboratory or in the sun or in the stars or vapors from all the minerals and metals, the lines which represent them always take their respective places on the scale. Some in groups, in one color section, or several sections, in a very complex way. If a star is approaching the earth or receding from it, these lines will be crowded either toward the red end or the violet end of the spectrum.

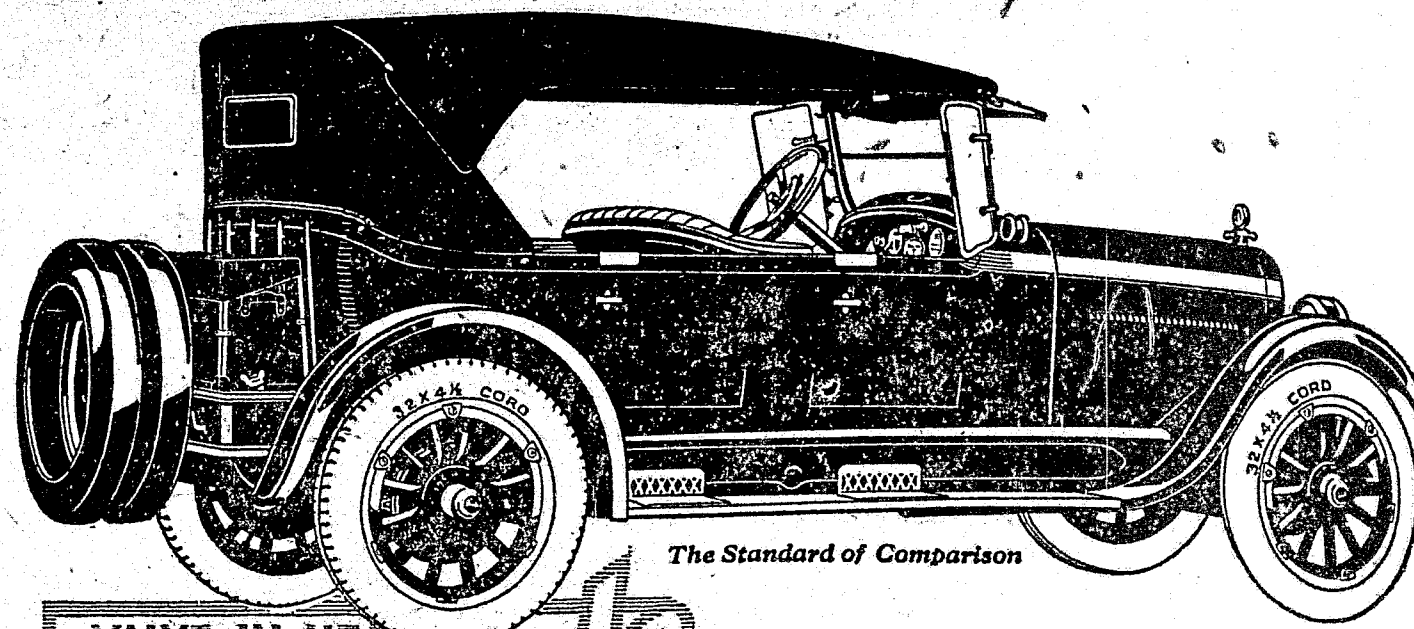

The Interferometer

The interferometer developed by A. A. Michelson is the latest important instrument for astronomical research. It is capable of measuring the diameter of the fixed stars.

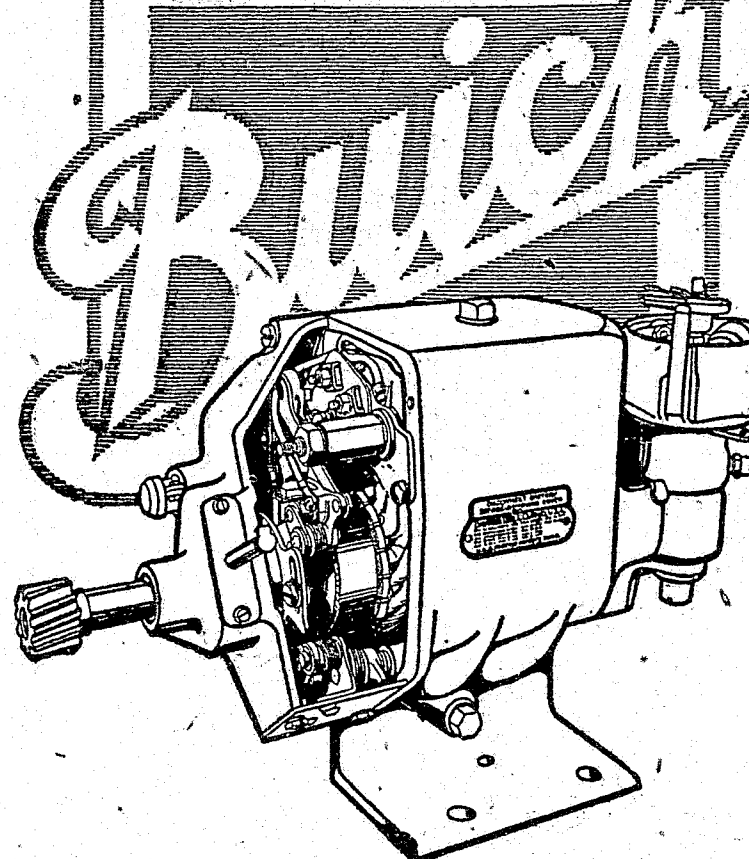

As long ago as 1890, Prof. Michelson measured the two D lines of sodium in the common salt, and while these two lines are very close together, so much so that a glass prism will hardly separate them, dispersion but bent by the best gratings the spectroscopist is possible to separate them so that 60 or 80 fine lines can be counted between them. Although the space is very minute, it is suggested that this absolute measurement be used as a standard of measure as it never changes. The interferometer has been applied to astronomy in the following manner:

A plate situated in front of the object lens of the telescope, has two parallel slits which can be separated by a micrometer screw. When the two beams or pencils of light which comes from the star through the two slits to a focus, fringes or dark bands in the light will appear. Now if the slits are moved apart or drawn together so that the fringes will just disappear which was caused by one of the beams of light interfering by light waves against the other beam (hence the name, interferometer) the micrometer measurement of the angle is obtained and a simple algebraic formula subtends the true angle.

The angles in measuring the brightest star in Orion, which is in the right shoulder of that constellation figure, A. Orionis (Betelgeuse) came out 0.046 (seconds) which corresponds to 240,000,000 miles or equal to an orbit (the sun as the center) extending nearly to the orbit of the planet Mars.

The interferometer as applied to double star research, when used with a screen or microscopic eye piece to receive the diffraction pattern and mounted on a revolving frame, indicates the period of component in path of orbit.

When telescopes alone are useless because of atmospheric conditions (boiling) and definition of image is destroyed, the interferometer can be used in "poor seeing," comparing 2 with a scale of 10. No other method to separate the very close double stars can equal that with the interferometer.

The Bolometer

The bolometer was devised by Samuel P. Langley, who was the pioneer in constructing the first flying machine. He was the Secretary of the Smithsonian Institute. The bolometer is used to measure the radiating energy from the sun.

As the ray of light proceeds from the sun and is conducted through a narrow slit before the telescope, the same as the spectroscopist, it is deflected by a prism of rock salt on a thin flat ribbon of platinum which is connected into a weak current (electric) with very delicate adjustments to make the current neutral with a balance coil. The intensity of the sun's energy through the prism is measured by a delicate galvanometer. Dr. C. G. Abbott of the Smithsonian Institute has developed the device to its present form. As the light and heat from the sun is essential to continue life, its variation is of great practical importance to humanity at large.

DON'T BURN THE LEAVES

Someone who presumably knows what he is talking about, says don't burn the leaves that fall from the trees. To do so means to destroy the most valuable of fertilizing ingredients known to man—nitrogen. Besides being the most valuable, nitrogen is the most expensive of fertilizing elements and most difficult to secure in commercial form. Flower gardens, rose bushes, strawberries, raspberries, fruit and even shade trees, should receive a much of the leaves as they fall from the trees. Be careful that the mulch is not raked too high about the trunk of the tree as rats and mice sometimes make nests in the leaves and during the winter months when food is scarce, gnaw the green bark for food. If there is a great abundance of leaves, rake them on the garden this Fall, any depth, and then turn them under in the Spring. If this is continued each year the garden will need little else for fertilizer.

Coats

In all of our striving to serve acceptably, in all of our efforts to build a store reputation upon the solid foundations of highest worth and absolute reliability, we believe no single effort has so nearly reached our ideals as the present assemblage of Women's Coats and Outer Wraps for the autumn and winter months of 1922 and 1923.

It is a season when French and American designers seem to have concentrated all of their best artistic genius upon the garment for outer wear and undoubtedly, the trend of fashion has been a strong influencing factor.

But, however this may be, the fact stands out in bold relief that this store is now showing a very remarkable collection of coats.

Entirely of cloth—part cloth and part fur.

Prices?—lowest possible, consistent with highest worth and unqualified satisfaction.

EAST STONEHAM

Fred L. McKeen

By the sudden death of Fred L. McKeen on the morning of September 11th, Stoneham lost one of its most valued citizens. He was born in Stoneham fifty-one years ago and had always made it his home. He was loyal to the best interests of Stoneham and had served it as selectman and in various other ways and always proved himself worthy of the trust shown in him by his townspeople. Mr. McKeen was a member of Kezar Lake Patrons of Husbandry and of the Knights of Pythias Lodge in East Stoneham.

The funeral, Wednesday morning, was attended by Rev. Mr. Miller. The many beautiful flowers bore silent testimony of the deep regard in which Mr. McKeen was held by his many friends. He is survived by his wife, also by four brothers and four sisters.
